

My interests in graphic design include packaging design, corporate identity, design systems, and poster design. I feel that the more variety, the better I work. I am a hands on kind of person, putting pieces together to make three dimensional forms is one of my many passions. I love learning new things and using new technology and equipment. I also love the challenge of problem solving, and learning why specific images and ideas work and do not work together for many design problems. These are some of the reasons why graphic design appeals to me. In the future, I hope to be working in a medium sized design firm that works with big and small clients with a variety of mediums and styles, which will give me a chance to continue to grow and develop as a designer and creative person. I would love to work on a team where everyone feels free to give honest and helpful feedback, I feel that a great design is developed through many perspectives and ideas combined into a single design system. I will work hard to get to where I want to be.
